Dementia care

Our trained dementia care professionals can give you the support you need at home to remain as independent as possible. We understand that everyone's dementia symptoms differ, so we customise our care to meet your individual needs and wishes.

How we can help you deal with dementia

A dementia diagnosis can be upsetting and unsettling for all concerned. We aim to take pressure and anxiety away from you and your family so that an atmosphere of calm and wellbeing can be restored.

We focus on the enabling aspect of support, which means that our carers are committed to encouraging people to do as much for themselves as possible, helping you to keep your independence.

Our dementia care service

To help make sure all of life's routines continue as normal, our carers can assist with getting up and dressed, taking medicine on time and preparing nutritious, regular meals. Carers can also lend a helping hand with practical tasks, such as cleaning, shopping and laundry.

Our priority is to support you by reminiscing and discussing subjects of interest, helping you join in community and social activities, and providing reassurance and companionship.

As dementia symptoms can vary day-to-day, our service can be adapted as needs change, and we offer visiting and live-in care options.

Our dementia care professionals

Our dementia carers are specifically trained in dementia and enablement, including the different types of dementia, the symptoms, and the frustrations experienced. They have a thorough understanding of how to support people with dementia, with knowledge of the most helpful communication techniques.
